Parable Of The Computer

Creation is likened to a computer.

Our body-brain is our hard drive, (stored information), the monitor, (visions from thought), and keyboard, (implementing actions), now able to complete a task.

Software is our consciousness installed on our own individual hard drive, (pre-programmed created soul), but able to adapt to one's own personal individual needs.
The program that runs the computer is the consciousness of God; the writer-creator of the operational program installed on the hard drive.
So now;
If one of these components is missing will the computer work?
If a virus is on the hard drive, how well does the computer work?
Did the virus come from the programmer?

When the computer is running like it was just taken out of the box, and your freely enjoying your wants, where is there any indication of any sort of separation between any of the components?
Think about this. The communication between computer and computer "connections" (no separation), either known or unknown!
If you understand this, you understand how God works.
